

WORKING WITH THE ENVIRONMENT

The Outdoor Education Group seeks to offer opportunities and experiences that allow students to challenge themselves in some of the most scenic and inspiring environments this country has to offer. The nature of these environments in terms of both land management restrictions (e.g. various stand and National Parks services) and natural volatility (e.g. outbreaks of Blue-Green Algae) is that some camps may require alteration or relocation.

A decision to alter or relocate a program is never made lightly. It is the result of careful consideration by The Outdoor Education Group on what will provide the most positive experience for students. Every effort to maintain the original integrity and challenge of a program is made. The school is always a part of this process and is informed of the options and choices available. Once a course of action is determined parents and students will be informed.